PREVIOUS TO APRIL 7, 1917
PREVIOUS TO April 7, 1917, when the United States entered the war, there were absolutely no conditions attached to Mutual Benefit Life Insurance contracts except that the premium must be paid and the policy holder must not commit suicide within the first twelve months. At the end of 12 months the paying of premiums was the only condition. After war was declared an extra premium was added to the regular premium. This was the first year, and notwithstanding the extra charge many millions of new insurance have been issued to people who entered the service, and who have entered.

The "War Clause" does not apply to policies where the applicant has passed his 40th birthday and as there are hundreds of men in this class "within the sound of my voice," who have NOT yet to this time made any adequate provision for the protection of their dependents after they have "gone west," or their own old age. I am desirous of showing you how you can now secure a policy that will never be a time when they were born when they could carry from three to twenty-five hundred dollars of life insurance. Life insurance—the Mutual Benefit Kind—more easily than right now. There has been no advance in the cost of Mutual Benefit insurance, and it has always been in LOW COST. There is no extra charge to the man under 40 until actually called to pay $47.50 per $1,000 of insurance. The Mutual Benefit age limits are from 14 to 70 years.
